DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY AT AUROBINDO PHARMA (P) LTD

Introduction

Aurobindo Pharma (P) Ltd, headquartered in Hyderabad, is one of India's leading pharmaceutical manufacturing companies with a global presence in over 150 countries. As the company expanded its operations across continents, managing timely decision-making, compliance, and operational efficiency became increasingly complex. To maintain agility and responsiveness in a regulated industry, the management recognized the need for an effective delegation of authority (DoA) system. Challenges they faced include: As operations scaled, decisions were increasingly bottlenecked at the senior management level. Routine approvals such as procurement, hiring, and quality checks had to pass through multiple hierarchical layers, causing delays in project execution and impacting productivity.Additionally, it limited mid-level managers, decision-making abilities, resulting in low morale and reduced accountability.

Delegation Strategy Adopted:

1) Structured Delegation of Authority Framework: Aurobindo Pharma introduced a well-defined Delegation of Authority Matrix (DoA Matrix) across departments like R&D, procurement, finance, HR, and operations. This matrix specified who had the authority to make decisions at various levels based on project size, financial implications, and risk levels.

2) Empowering Mid-Level Managers: Functional heads and middle managers were empowered to take decisions within specified limits, such as approving vendor contracts, project expenditures, or team expansion. This reduced dependence on top management for everyday decisions.

3) Digital Approval System: The Company implemented an ERP-based workflow for approvals. Delegated responsibilities were mapped into the system, ensuring transparency, faster approvals, and proper documentation. This also ensured compliance and audit readiness.

4) Training and Accountability Mechanisms: Managers were trained in decision-making, risk management, and regulatory compliance to handle their new responsibilities effectively. Periodic reviews ensured that accountability was maintained without overstepping authority.

Outcomes: The new delegation system led to a 35% reduction in decision-making time, increased project turnaround speed, and improved ownership at middle management levels. It also fostered a culture of trust, responsibility, and leadership development within the organization.

Questions for Discussion

a) How did the Delegation of Authority Matrix improve operational efficiency at Aurobindo Pharma?

b) What role does technology play in implementing an effective delegation system?

c) How can delegation of authority contribute to leadership development within an organization?

d) What risks can arise from delegation, and how can they be mitigated in a pharmaceutical company?

3. Analyse the following case-lets and answer the questions asked at the end:

   a) Prakash Nair was irritated and confused after his meeting with David Simon. Prakash was the manager of Shopper's Haven's Department Store at Cochin and David Simon was the District Manager for the company, in-charge of departmental stores in Cochin District. Three weeks earlier, Prakash had received a letter from David Simon explaining that top management decided on an MBO Program to help Shopper's Haven improve efficiency and increase profit contributions. In that letter David had said that the objectives established should be used to measure performance of stores managers. They were instructed to list the objectives they believed were appropriate for their store and then await the district manager's review visit.

   Prakash had done just what he was instructed to do. In a meeting with his five department managers, Prakash had chosen objectives that they all agreed were appropriate. All the objectives represented performance levels that were improvements over the previous year and were reasonably attainable. The Objectives they established were:

   (i) To increase selling efficiency, as measured by the ratio of salaries to sales, by 10 per cent;

   (ii) To reduce inventory losses to 2 per cent of sales; and

   (iii) Improve customer service to the point that there will be 20 per cent reduction of complaint letters mailed to the head office.

   David Simon arrived late for the MBO review visit and stressed that there was very little time he could spend. He quickly scanned the written statement of objectives that Prakash gave him, then explained that profit improvement was really what the home office was interested in. Senior management had decided that a 12 per cent increase in profit would be reasonable objective for Prakash Nair's Store. This single objective, David Simon said, would facilitate the monitoring of performance by the head office and would also reduce the amount of information the store would have to permit. The visit was cut short because David had to attend another meeting.
